PREFACE.

It has become an axiom that every Legislature has its own special and peculiar features. "Sufficient unto the (legislative) day is the evil thereof." Fortunately the Legislature of 1907, in sharp contrast with most of recent years, had no "investigation," although it came perilously near one. Never before was there a single measure involving so vast financial interests as the legislation involving the proposed union, or "merging," of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company with that of the Boston & Maine; and certainly no legislative hearing ever before had before it within the same hour two railroad presidents of so great influence as President Mellen of the former and President Tuttle of the latter, both of whom were before the committee on railroads on the same afternoon. This session was marked also by the passage of the "anti-bucket-shop" legislation, and of acts to enable savings banks to furnish life insurance at cost, and to compel one day's rest in seven as well as to perfect the eight-hour law in accordance with the wishes of organized labor. There were other measures of more special and yet advanced legislation, and the revision of the election laws,—the longest bill ever enacted. A bill to do away with the death penalty for murder, practically, came nearer passage than ever before; and there were several recess committees and commissions provided for, more than ever before in one year, one to include all labor matters and another all fire insurance matters. And yet, the session was no longer than some at which less business was accomplished. In 1874, the first session ever reported by the editor of this Souvenir, the session lasted until July 1, and Saturday forenoon sessions were then the rule; but certainly much less business was then transacted. Those were days more of talk; these more of action. A new and valuable feature, this year, is that devoted to our members of Congress. The editor of the Souvenir says to all his patrons, most cordially:—"May you live long and prosper."

HALL OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

HOUSE READING ROOM AND POST OFFICE.

DORIC HALL.

This hall has seen varied gatherings, but none of greater interest than that of April 17, 1861. On that day, the first volunteer company of the whole country, during the late War of the Rebellion, assembled here, chose its officers, received overcoats from the government and in an hour and a half from the time of assembling was on its way to the front. The story, in more detail, is as follows: In Cambridge, in 1860, had been formed a company of "Wide Awakes" to help elect President Lincoln. Hon. J. M. S. Williams, congressman from that district, promised them that if they would keep up their organization they could go to Washington to see Lincoln inaugurated. But the United States government forbade the assembling of such bodies at the national capital. During the dark days of February, 1851, several of the company agreed to volunteer if they were needed, and, on the 14th of February, several of them signed an agreement to that effect. First on the list was the name of John Kinnear, now first clerk of Sergeant-at Arms. In the first week in March, he, with a few others, visited the State House and personally tendered their services to Governor Andrew. He advised them that there was no immediate need of their services and that they return to Cambridge, whence he would summon them if necessary. Then came the news of the breaking out of rebellion. They at once visited the State House, finding Governor and Council in session. Governor Andrew told them to return to Cambridge and that they would receive orders in an hour. They returned and the orders speedily reached them. Then, again, they hastened to the State House, many of their members leaving their work and throwing their tools into the street. Reaching the State House, they assembled in Doric Hall, ninety-seven of them. In a small adjoining room they chose officers, electing James Prentice Richardson, now of Texas, as captain. They first went to the Old Colony station, but were soon ordered to the "S. R. Spaulding," where they embarked for Fortress Monroe. They were first assigned to the Fifth regiment, but were soon transferred to the Third, becoming Company C. This was, without doubt, the first volunteer company of the Rebellion. It is a matter of history that this prompt, loyal and general response of this company, in contrast with the scattering returns from more pretentious organizations, did much to encourage the State authorities and "the great war Governor."

In this hall lay in state the body of Charles Sumner, Sunday, March 15, 1874, where it was viewed by a multitude as vast as time would allow.

In this hall gathered the "Army of the Unemployed," February 20, 1894, whence they were removed by detachments of the district and Boston police, but without violence. They had just been addressed on the Capitol steps by Governor Greenhalge.

This view is taken from the main entrance and shows the statues of Washington and John A. Andrew in the distance.

JAMES OTIS IN DEFENCE OF THE PEOPLE.
This painting represents James Otis arguing before the Superior Court of Massachusetts in February, 1761, in the Council Chamber of the old Town House in Boston against the "Writs of Assistance." The painter of this picture was Robert Reid. The painting is eight feet by ten and is on the north wall of the "Marble Staircase." (Half-tone from photograph by N. L. Rush, No. 553 Massachusetts Ave., Boston.)

MEMORIAL HALL.

"Return of the Flags," by Edward Simmons in the upper center. Statue of Maj. Gen. William Francis Partlett, by Daniel Chester French in lower left corner. In niches enclosed with glass are Battle Flags of Regiments that served in the Civil War. Other niches contain bronze and marble statues of Governors in office during building of the present State House.

MEMORIAL HALL.

"Battle of Concord Bridge," by Edward Simmons on the left. Pilgrims on the "Mayflower" by Henry O. Walker on the right. Huge monoliths of Sicilian marble surround the Hall, and the Gallery is of the same material, the whole making the most costly hall of its kind in the country.

THE OLD SOUTH MEETING-HOUSE.

built in 1730, on the lot of Gov. John Winthrop, corner of Milk and Washington streets, and dedicated in April of the same year. On November 27, 1773, here was held the meeting at which it was resolved that the English tea should not be landed; and on December 16 here was held the meeting with 7,000 people attending, before the pouring of the tea into Boston harbor by the Sons of Liberty, disguised as Mohawk Indians. Here Warren spoke in March, 1775, three months before he was killed at the battle of Bunker Hill. In the siege of Boston it was used as a riding-school by the British. Its external appearance has not been changed for 150 years. No religious services have been held here since 1872. Now occupied by a loan collection of Revolutionary and other relics, the admission fees going to the preservation fund.

FANEUIL HALL, DOCK SQUARE.

Built in 1763; dedicated, March 14, and completed the same month, on the site of an earlier one built in 1742 and burned on Jan. 13, 1761. Enlarged in 1805 to its present proportions. Rebuilt largely in 1899. The upper hall is the armory of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company. Called also "The Cradle of Liberty."

DANIEL WEBSTER.

As one of the foremost, "Legislators" of Massachusetts (for he was once a member of the Massachusetts Senate) it is eminently proper to place here, close beside the "Old State House," this rare but peculiarly interesting picture of Daniel Webster beneath his favorite tree at his New Hampshire home.

THE OLD STATE HOUSE.

Built in 1748, on site of burned town hall, at the head of State Street Boston.

In the foreground occurred the Boston Massacre of March 5, 1770. Been used as State House, City Hall, and Post Office. British troops quartered here, 1768, and General Gage held council of war here before battle of Bunker Hill. Declaration of Independence read from balcony in view; from other end Washington reviewed procession in 1789. Here State Constitution planned and ratified. William Lloyd Garrison took refuge here from mob, October, 1835, it being then used for City Hall.
